1 of 250 · Grigio Vulcano with Factory Livery · 21,000 Miles · 10 Lamborghini Services

In March 2016 Lamborghini took a Huracán to Geneva wearing fighter jet markings. The Avio was the first limited edition of the model, 250 cars worldwide, and the only Huracán ever built as a tribute to Italian aeronautical engineering. This is one of them.

Finished in Grigio Vulcano, one of five matte Ad Personam shades created for the Avio and available on no other Huracán, wearing the factory white livery drawn from Italian air force academy markings, with the tricolore cockade on each flank. The livery is original factory Avio specification and is not an aftermarket addition.

The cabin is where the Avio separates itself from a standard car. Nero Ade Alcantara throughout, with the L63 emblem hand embroidered into the seat bolsters and laser etched into the seat centres, console and door panels in a hexagonal pattern Lamborghini had never used on a production car before. L for Lamborghini, 63 for 1963, the year Ferruccio founded the company.
